

I have decided to treat myself to the luxury of XM radio. I have control over what I hear and when....and I get the pleasure of having pure listening channels no matter how many different areas I'm driving through. XM radio works for me and I'm willing to buy it and pay for the ability to have it. I see no reason why Congress or any other group should try to curtail this opportunity. I resent the fact that instead of a competitive market, action groups are trying to get the government to intercede. I'm very much against my taxes being used in this way. Marcia Jaffe
